

I feel that the morse code test requirement should be retained. We are now more than ever the primary emergency communications outlet for most areas. If conditions are extremely bad, then morse code will be the only efficient means of communications. If the requirement is removed, then soon there will not be enough operators with viable knowledge of the code to provide emergency communication support for this mode.